

The main argument which proponents of BPL technology use to justify their claims that BPL will not radiate harmful interference, is based on the faulty premiss that AC power lines are transmission lines. While this is certainly true at 60 Hz, at RF frequencies they will behave like wire antennas. At best, AC power lines are lossy transmission lines at RF frequencies, and WILL radiate significantly.